PRAGMATICS

This course focuses on the most important theories and issues in pragmatics, such as speech acts, implicatures, presuppositions, and various types of communicative interaction, text functions, reference and deixis, as well as the relationship between pragmatics, semantics and syntax. Particular topics include reading and discussing theoretical literature in the field of the pragmatic research.